

Adult autism: load, access and recovery

Original support worksheet | Adults | Reviewed 2026-10-10

Use fictional or appropriately de-identified notes. Write, draw, dictate or point. Not a validated measure, diagnostic test or crisis service.

Day demands: Travel, sensory, social, tasks

Available access: Predictability, communication, control

Effort spent: Visible + hidden work

Recovery need: Time, privacy, preferred activity

Support experiment: Participation + cost review

Demand sequence, including preparation and travel

Access I need and effort others may not see

Recovery preferences and delayed costs

One chosen environmental change and how to review it

Next step: who will do what, by when, and how will we review helpfulness or harm?

Marked deterioration, inability to meet basic needs, suicidality or new medical symptoms requires appropriate assessment. Do not attribute every difficulty to autism or prescribe endurance through overload.
