

Dissociation: orientation, time gaps and daily function

Original support worksheet | Adults | Reviewed 2026-10-10

Use fictional or appropriately de-identified notes. Write, draw, dictate or point. Not a validated measure, diagnostic test or crisis service.

Reported experience: Detachment, distance, missing time

Knowledge source: Remembered / reported / inferred

Context: Sleep, health, medicines, stress

Practical support: Orientation, notes, shorter task

Assessment + review: Function, safety, uncertainty

Experience in my own words

What I know directly versus what was reported

Context and tasks affected

Support preference and assessment question

Next step: who will do what, by when, and how will we review helpfulness or harm?

Acute confusion, new neurological symptoms, loss of consciousness, driving danger or inability to remain safe needs prompt medical/clinical response. Do not treat unexplained time gaps as proof of trauma or encourage unverified memory reconstruction.