

Trauma cues: present orientation and chosen support

Original support worksheet | Adults | Reviewed 2026-10-10

Use fictional or appropriately de-identified notes. Write, draw, dictate or point. Not a validated measure, diagnostic test or crisis service.

Cue / context: What changed; current safety?

Experience: Body, memory, distance, alarm

Preference: What helps; what to avoid

Chosen orientation: External cue, company or space

Reconnection: Function, choice, next clinical step

Cue and current safety; no trauma details required

What I notice and how I can communicate it

Orientation choices that help or worsen things

Next action and who can help

Next step: who will do what, by when, and how will we review helpfulness or harm?

Current violence, abuse, inability to remain safe, acute confusion or medical change needs appropriate urgent response. Do not assume every altered state is a trauma reaction or force trauma disclosure.
